PINOTAGE

This grape is a South African specialty and is almost exclusively farmed here. It is a cross between the Pinot Noir and the Cinsaut. At the time of Pinotage's creation, Cinsaut was known in South Africa as Hermitage, hence the name! It was a Professor A. I. Perold from Stellenbosch University who was responsible for the marriage of these two well known varieties in 1925.

Pinotage may be made in several different styles: young, light, and fruity, like Beaujolais; deep and rich like a Côtes du Rhône or Zinfandel; or elegant and restrained like Bordeaux are the most common styles. There are also a few rare 'blush' versions and several are fortified into ports.

So, what should you expect in a red Pinotage? Good depth of flavour; a unique, individual, fruity and refreshing wine. Some tasters remark on a banana-like taste. We have noted bramble fruits and a velvety texture. It is a dinner wine, with good levels of alcohol, giving depth, structure and aging ability.
